“After considering some extremely talented agencies, we decided that retaining two best in class partners to work with us on the advertising and media roles gave us the best combination of talent to help us as we continue to evolve our marketing programs,” said Mark Crumpacker, chief marketing and development officer at Chipotle. “Venables impressed us from the beginning with their insights and ability to translate our strategy into really compelling advertising, while Mediahub demonstrated extraordinary analytic and media targeting capabilities. Working together with our internal marketing team and these new agency partners positions us well to improve the impact of our marketing programs over the coming months.”

This is an exciting time to be Chipotle’s partner as they evolve their amazing brand story and success with breakthrough, attention getting media.”

“Chipotle is a brand we have long admired, and we are excited to be working alongside a marketing team which has such a strong and compelling creative pedigree,” said Paul Birks-Hay, president of Venables Bell.
